STORY BOGUS

Death and Destruction
Rumors Afloat.

Trash Fire at Lahaina Starts a Thrilling Tale of Arson and Murder.

Rumors of all sorts of trouble on Maui were rife in town yesterday. After church there were little knots of people discussing the great riot at Lahaina with the burning of the mill and the killing of several people by the infuriated Japanese laborers lately on strike. Where the rumor started is a mystery but it did start and travelled and as it travelled it grew.

Two or three people who told four or five other people had been told by somebody else that the Japanese laborers at Pioneer Mill had burned the mill and surrounding cane fields after having killed the sugar boiler and several others. One man was positive it was the plantation doctor who had been killed. The news could not get here except by boat and so Captain Johnny Dower of the Lehua, which arrived from Kaunakakai yesterday was hunted up. He was asked to give the details of the terrible happenings on Maui and when he had heard the story, asked where the news came from as his vessel was the only one in from the neighborhood and as he knew nothing of it, it was shown to be a canard. When he was at Lahaina last Thursday all but a few of the Japs had returned to work. Manager Ahlborn had acceded to some of the demands made by the Japanese, and apparently, satisfied, they were at work again. In crossing to Molokai on Friday Captain Dower reports seeing smoke and fire from the direction of Kaunakakai, but says it was a trash fire. The suit of some of the laborers against the plantation was to have been heard on Saturday. Had there been a conflagration of the size necessarily caused by the burning of the mill and cane it would have been plainly seen from Lanai or Molokai.

AT THE ORPHEUM.

Some Fresh Changes for this Evening's Program.

The program now being presented by the Haganites is in many respects the best that they have given. Everything on the bill is new and the whole performance peculiarly acceptable to Orpheum playgoers in that it is practically vaudeville and high class vaudeville at that. There is nothing smacking of horse play in the entertainment, and much genuine and original humor. The different acts are well staged and appropriately costumed and the music, of its kind, irreproachable.

There are some excellent voices in the company and the chorus invariably shows signs of careful and persistent drilling. The house was completely sold out on Saturday night and everybody seemed more than well contented with the attractions offered. Hogan came over the side of the Eureka with the accumulations of fourteen days soaking in the briny "stuck on his shape" in the form of seaweed, barnacles, and decidedly live lobsters and crabs, grasping a squid in his right hand. Every number on the program merits praise. Livers and Ringgold made a big hit in their dancing, while Stanley admittedly presents the best trapeze act seen here. Miss Moss steadily grows in favor and Hogan and Hearde naturally make a team of the first quality. The drill was enlivened and the singing of the last act materially strengthened by the addition of the ladies of the company in full nursing uniform of the Red Cross Society. Tonight sees a change in all the solos and specialties and the addition of the "shadowgraphs." Hogan is to sing a new topical song on local events entitled "What the Little Fijians Said to Me," to which he and Allan Dunn have contributed severally the music and words.

FOUND NOT GUILTY.

Case Against Hon. A. S. Cleghorn
Is Dismissed.

A. S. Cleghorn was found not guilty, in Judge Wilcox's court Saturday morning, of the alleged offense of erecting a building on the Kawaiahae cemetery property without first obtaining a permit.

Marshal Brown conducted the prosecution, Mr. Cleghorn being represented by Attorney A. S. Humphreys. The prosecution endeavored to show that a permit was applied for by the defendant, but none was issued because the plans and specifications of the building did not conform to the new building regulations recently put into operation by the Board of Health. It was also testified that Mr. Cleghorn was the one who made the building contracts on the part of the church, and that the rents coming from the new stores were collected by him. On the other hand the defense claimed that Mr. Cleghorn was not responsible individually in the action brought against him. The trial was ended by Judge Wilcox declaring that he found nothing in the evidence to hold that Mr. Cleghorn was guilty of the charge brought against him, and dismissing the action.
